1. The Belene forced labor camp is six kilometers west of the village of Belene and five kilometers south of the Danube. A bad road connects the camp with Belene village; there is also a road to the station at Oresh (N 4336, E 2513). Near the camp there is a canal four to five meters wide and 1.5 meters deep, dug by the prisoners. The whole area between the camp and the canal is irrigated by ditches. A fishing station is said to exist near the camp.
2. Compound 3 is better organized than some of the other compounds and the internees receive better rations. There are no women.¹ There are between seven and eight hundred prisoners in the compound, ILLEGIB
3. For prisoners under discipline the life is especially hard. Extra labor norms are required of them and if these are not fulfilled, the prisoners are punished. Some of the punishments are loss of the privileges of writing letters, receiving food packages (five kilos per month), and seeing relatives once or twice a year.
4. As with Bulgaria's other forced labor camps, prisoners do not remain long in one camp, so that trace of them is easily lost. The following are known to have resided in Belene at one time, but it is not known whether they are still there:
 - a. General Aleksiev;²
 - b. Medical Doctor Nikola Barev;
 - c. Kocho Bonev (former Agrarian Deputy);³
 - d. Gen. Gocho Gochev;⁴
 - e. Sveti Ivanov (a former journalist);⁵ and
